Gov. Tom Wolf has announced that Pennsylvania will begin a phased-in reopening approach beginning on May 8. The state is taking a regional approach to reopening, with the focus initially on the north-central and northwest regions of the state. The administration will categorize reopening into three phases: red, yellow and green. As regions or counties move into the yellow phase, some restrictions on work and social interaction will ease while others, such as closures of schools, gyms, and other indoor recreation centers, as well as limitations around large gatherings, remain in place. The green phase eases most restrictions by lifting the stay-at-home and business closure orders to allow the economy to strategically reopen while continuing to prioritize public health. The administration has said it will issue additional guidance throughout the process to support best health practices, building on the existing business and building safety orders and adapting as needed. More information on the governor's plan can be found https://www.governor.pa.gov/process-to-reopen-pennsylvania/
